NEWS

The class of 1973 which enters Middlebury College in the fall of 1969 will become heir to innovations planned over the past years. Since they do not know the old ways, new plans and facilities will appear to be the normal Middlebury pattern—but they will come to see through their four years that Middlebury is constantly changing to accomplish better the complex task of liberal education.

These recent years have been labeled "years of the student" because of the growing national interest and concern in education from the student's point of view. Middlebury as a college rather than a research institute has always attempted to see education from the student's view so that recent changes in the policy-making arrangements of the College conform to our tradition while introducing new ideas to meet contemporary needs. For the first time this fall, students will sit as full voting members on most of the major faculty committees dealing with educational matters—running from admissions to curriculum to athletic policy. The students will have a particularly strong voice in the faculty committee which plans the Winter Program under the College's new 4-1-4 curriculum. After adjusting to the new time schedule, the College has been very encouraged by the new pattern. The Winter Program with its new curriculum every year builds in educational experimentation and the opportunity both for topical relevance and concentrated study in esoteric specialties.

In the Fall of 1969 the new multi-million dollar science center will be fully utilized for the first time when the Department of Biology takes up quarters on the third floor. In so doing they join the chemists, physicists and geologists who have been in the building since January. Shifting the Biology department permits the College to revamp the current Warner Science facilities to provide expanded room for the Psychology, Geography and Mathematics departments. A major reconstruction of faculty space for the Humanities and Social Sciences will be completed in Munroe Hall by the opening of the school year. No doubt faculty who have been housed in various out-of-the-way offices while the major building program was in progress will appreciate finally receiving permanent quarters. Those faculty temporarily housed in the Christian A. Johnson Building (Music and Fine Arts) may not relish relinquishing their elegant space, but given the high level of activity in that magnificent new building—student theater in the many-tiered "great hall," a "structuring of sounds" course that involved rolling detergent drums down the hallways and bells skittering along a tightrope from the basement to the top of the vaulted ceiling three floors up—they may appreciate the quiet.

Sometime during the Fall term, the College will open a unique experiment in College life. Three buildings of unusual contemporary design will open as "Student Societies." These "Societies" will provide dining facilities and social facilities for small groups of students. The Societies will be thoroughly coeducational and will have direct tie-in with the academic life of the College through the presence of faculty offices and seminar rooms in the facility. A member of the faculty has been appointed to act as chief coordinator for the Societies, to advise the students and to facilitate the integration of the life of the societies with the academic side of the campus.

Probably the biggest headlines of the Fall will be captured by the various gentlemen who head up the Athletic departments of the College. Last December, Middlebury was proud to announce the appointment of a new Director of Athletics, Dick Coleman, who resigned as head football coach of the Princeton Tigers to accept the position at Middlebury. Dick has had a particularly busy time filling various slots in the Athletic area. This year will see the debut of four new coaches: John Anderson, previously assistant football coach at Boston College, takes over from the veteran Walter "Duke" Nelson; Gary Walters, a former teammate of the great Bill Bradley, comes from Dartmouth to coach basketball; G. Thomas Lawson, whose soccer teams at Proctor High School have compiled a 50-0-2 record over the past four seasons, begins the fall as the College's new soccer coach; Bill Hess, formerly head football, lacrosse and ski coach at Phillips Exeter, becomes head lacrosse coach and assistant football coach. In the meantime, Nordic cup winner John Bower, the ski mentor, will be enjoying the new chairlift installed at the Snow Bowl. The chairlift will allow the Bowl to develop the South face of the mountain for ski trails.
